Gathered here,
packed tight in a room
with everyone who is alone;
cut off from their choices;
and voices are tellin' me so.
No more hearts shall race
in this place
where comfort's unwelcome;
but, You are there.

You are there when I am hurting,
You are there when others leave.
Never do I stand alone;
You're my reason to believe.
Even when I run away
and no matter where I hide,
Your love will always find my heart
and penetrate inside.
You are there.

Some place new;
how far can I go
where everyone has been before?
But still we all want to go;
and so slow to remember all,
all the hurt and pain.
There was no gain
and dignity walked out;
but, You are there.

You are there when I can't move on.
You are there when tomorrow's gone.
You are there when I can't forgive.
You are there when I need to live.
